Flyers' Captain . . .

A young man whose movie rating is "A" will lead the University of Dayton into action Friday when the Flyers meet Youngstown College in a nite game at Youngstown.

He's Lou Cannarozzi, senior right guard and captain of the Flyer grid squad.

"The average fan has to see movies of a game to really appreciate a fellow like Lou," Joe Gavin, Flyer head coach, says. "Lou is one of those unspectacular players—but he warms a coach's heart. He's the kind of kid who knows his job and gets it done."

Films of Flyer games here bear out Gavin's observation. For they reveal that Cannarozzi sharply and systematically chops opposing players out of the line with hard blocks. The 209-pounder, operating in "where it's thick," seldom catches the eye of fans during a game, but they are conscious of the holes he helps jar open in opponents' lines.

At 5 ft. 9 in. Cannarozzi is a "shorty" but the Cleveland has always been able to take care of himself in tussels with larger foes. He is one of six boys in a family of nine children.

With four older brothers "who batted me around a bit and playing with their older group" Lou had to "learn to be rugged. I just didn't have any other choice," the Flyer captain commented.

Lou played tackle on defense and guard on offense while at Cleveland's Collinwood High School. He has been used exclusively as an offensive guard at Dayton and Gavin isn't counting on using him on defense this fall.

The Flyer captain, however, gets a taste of defense during scrimmages at times "just to keep my hand in." He has won two football letters at U. D. and is on his way to a third.

What's more important to Cannarozzi than winning a letter however is "I gotta keep that "A" rating in the movies. Gotta block sharp."

Good Things Come In Small Packages

You can't blame 'em out at the University of Dayton if they're breathing a few silent prayers that lightning does strike twice.

There is a feeling in the Flyer football camp that Dayton may come up with a colorful successor to Hawaiian halfback Leroy (The Hyphen) Ka-Ne. Ka-Ne, who finished his college career in a blaze of glory as a defensive star for the East in the East-West Shrine game last December, was drafted by the pro Cleveland Browns, but now is a machine-gunner in Korea.

Now another Hawaiian lad has stepped prominently into the Flyer football picture. He's Jimmy Keeau-moku Akau, a 19-year-old, 177-pounder, who like Ka-Ne got his start in football in Honolulu's barefoot league.

It appears that Akau will be the Flyers offensive fullback this season.

Akau, while a good 15 pounds lighter than Ka-Ne, boasts a powerful set of legs that may be just what the Flyers need for the fullback post. When the fast stepping youngster, whose Hawaiian name means Fast Boat, goes into action the Flyers will be counting heavily on those churning legs.

And despite his lack of weight Akau is considered a hard runner.

"He hits in there mighty hard," is the comment of Flyer quarterback, Frank Siggins, "and when we need a couple of yards, he gets 'em."

Akau still prefers barefoot football. "Getting my start that way, I think I play better without shoes. I know I can run faster, but for me those days of playing barefooted are gone forever I guess," the smiling Hawaiian says.

That smile is reminiscent of Ka-Ne. No matter how hard the former Flyer was hit he always came up with a smile. Akau has the same faculty. As a sophomore Ka-Ne was an outstanding defensive halfback; as a junior he became an offensive sensation. Akau was a hard hitting tackler as a defensive half last season, his sophomore year.

This year he seems headed for offense. Yes, there are a number of things that point to lightning striking twice at the University of Dayton.
